A cookie is a simple, small data file that a website uses to ask your browser to store this data file on your device when you visit this website. Such cookies allow the browser to 'remember' certain information, such as an account name or email address. Normally browsers will allow websites to send cookies, unless you as a user have specified otherwise.

Types of cookies used

First party and third party cookies

First party cookies are created by the website itself. These cookies allow us to improve the user experience of the website(s).

Third party cookies are cookies created by other organizations. On the website(s) you can, for example, find cookies from Google (Google Analytics). The Google Analytics tool helps us understand how visitors interact with our website(s). Google Analytics never shows individual information.

Permanent and session cookies

Permanent cookies

Permanent cookies enable us to recognise you when you visit our website again. As a result, the website can be set up specifically to your preferences. A cookie also lets us remember if you have given us permission to store cookies. As a result, you do not have to repeat your preferences each time, which saves you time and makes it easier for you to use our website. Permanent cookies can be deleted at any time via the settings of your browser or application.

Session cookies

By using a session cookie, we can see which parts of the website you have viewed during your visit. This allows us to adapt our service as much as possible to the browsing behaviour of our visitors. These cookies are automatically deleted as soon as you close your web browser or application.
